A moral call to defend Black voting rights: How Catholics should respond

By Efran Menny - 12 May 2026

Black Catholic Messenger

Continued from last week - Far from being simply a macro-level issue, many White Catholics also need to understand the importance of the principle of solidarity.

Politically, this starts with the implications of their voting and the responsibility to vote for the common good. The ballot box isn't just an individual choice but a reflection of how government can function for everyone-the marginalized, the poor, and the historically neglected. The fight to organize and push back against injustice requires not just Black Americans but a united push from White Americans and others as well.

According to the data, White Catholics overwhelmingly vote for Republic presidential candidates, which can have an immense ripple effect on the judiciary and the potential to influence state and local decision-making. If the Church in America wants to be a moral witness against the forces of evil, addressing voter suppression and the disenfranchisement of Black Americans requires prophetic courage and willingness to align with the suffering of others.

There are not simply political issues, but a failure to adhere to a moral vision that recognizes the dignity of all. Black Americans have long fought to make this nation a beacon of light for democracy. Through the Civil Rights Movement and the martyrs who sacrificed their lives, we made America confront its failures and establish democracy not just as an aspiration but as a realized concept.

In this moment of continued assault on Black Americans and their civic responsibility, the enduring call of now is for widening hearts to embrace justice for all, protect human dignity, and assure the right to vote. If Black voting participation is weakened, the promissory note of justice and rights will only be a hollow promise-one that was apparently never intended for all but only for some.

Efran Menny is a husband, father, and a regular contributor to BCM. His work is informed by his experience as an educator and his studies in social work. He has a passion for elevating topics on justice and theology for Black Catholics

School News

As we come to the close of another wonderful school year, we give thanks to God for the many blessings shared within our school community. Our students have grown not only academically, but also in faith, kindness, leadership, and service to others. From the youngest learners taking their first steps in the classroom to our graduates preparing for new adventures, each student has contributed to the joy and spirit of our school.

This year was filled with moments of learning, laughter, prayer, friendship, and achievement. We are proud of the perseverance our students showed, the compassion they shared and the way they continued to live out Catholic values each day. We are equally grateful for our dedicated faculty and staff whose commitment, care, and tireless efforts helped guide and support our students throughout the year.

Thank you to our parishioners for your continued prayers, encouragement, and support of Catholic education. Your generosity and commitment help make our school a place where children are nurtured in both faith and knowledge.

May God bless all of our students, families, faculty, staff, and parish community with a safe, restful, and joy-filled summer.

Respectfully, Nancy Lynch, Principal
